

Bernhardt on Broadway at Hagopian

“The Divine Sarah” spotted at Hagopian World of Rugs

Bernhardt on Broadway, a one-woman musical written and performed by Carol Dunitz, was presented in the Hagopian World of Rugs, Birmingham showroom on Saturday, March 24th. Using props and costumes appropriate to Ms. Bernhardt’s era the playwright created a charming period visual in the large showroom that served as the backdrop for a riveting performance.

The play was a historical romp through Bernhardt’s colorful life and began with “Sarah” reflecting on her relationship with her mother, a French courtesan. Seamlessly moving through the stages of Bernhardt’s career, the production recalls close friendships with reknowned artists, conquests and marriages made along the way.

The original music and songs written and performed by Ms. Dunitz added charm and gaiety to the narrative. Speaking with a flawless French accent, Ms. Dunitz channeled Sarah Bernhardt and presented her one-woman play with aplomb. I would highly recommend that if you haven’t seen this “Michigan-made” production you buy a ticket today. Future dates are listed on her website at www.BernhardtOnBroadway.com.

This event hosted by Hagopian World of Rugs and the Hagopian Family who endeavor to support cultural and educational projects in the communities where they do business.