Playwright and Composer Turns Musical into Charitable Fundraising Opportunity

Carol Dunitz has taken a cue from the Great Depression when people chased their troubles away with entertainment. Noting that the country's current economic woes are taking their toll on charities and non-profits, she is offering to partner with charities and non-profits to provide entertainment that enables them to increase their financial stability.

Instead of paying thousands of dollars to advertise, Dunitz is giving organizations the opportunity to sell tickets to her new one woman musical, Bernhardt on Broadway, and pocket all the money that would normally be used for promotion and more.

Bernhardt on Broadway is about Sarah Bernhardt, the woman often referred to as the most famous actress who ever lived. David W. Menefee, author of Sarah Bernhardt in the Theater of Films and Sound Recordings and an expert on Bernhardt says, "Bernhardt on Broadway by Carol Dunitz captures the essential character of Sarah Bernhardt and serves up the divine spirit of the woman and artist on a plate decorated with toe-tapping tunes."

Dunitz says, "Musicals have always been a great way to put a smile on people's faces and a song in their hearts. They can now be a great way to raise money."

Carol Dunitz has a doctorate in Speech Communication and Theatre and is a professional writer and speaker with several books and numerous marketing campaigns to her credit. She has been writing music since she was nine years old.
